1. Background

Bangladesh Nari Progati Sangha (BNPS) is a national women's rights organization working since 1986 to promote gender equality, social justice, and women's empowerment.

Project 1: Women Peacebuilders for Social Cohesion

Under the UN Women supported project "Strengthening the leadership of Rohingya and host community women peacebuilders to advance social cohesion and gender-responsive protection in Cox's Bazar," BNPS supports 220 women peacebuilders across 11 Women Peacebuilding Groups (WPGs) in nine Rohingya camps and two host communities to advance conflict prevention, mediation, social cohesion, and gender-responsive protection in Cox's Bazar. Key activities include comprehensive capacity building on leadership, peacebuilding, mediation, paralegal support, and security risk management; establishing community-based early warning systems; facilitating intergenerational and intercommunity dialogue for trust building and conflict prevention; and generating evidence to inform the next National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security in Bangladesh. The project empowers women as agents of peace while fostering gender-equitable norms and strengthening community resilience in both refugee and host community contexts.

Project 2: Climate Security and Women's Resilience

BNPS is also expected to implement an upcoming UN Women-supported Climate Security initiative focused on strengthening the resilience of women peacebuilders and community women through disaster risk reduction (DRR) and climate-responsive programming.
