Computer research scientist

National average salary: $107,614 per year

Primary duties: Computer research scientists investigate and discover new uses for computer-related technologies. They design experiments to test software systems, analyze the results and often publish their findings in academic journals. Computer research scientists are in demand because their work helps drive innovation in the tech industry, which benefits from investigative services just like many other industries.