Computer systems analyst

National average salary: $79,891 per year

Primary duties: Computer systems analysts study and update computer systems to improve their efficiency. They also train other employees on new systems, stay up to date on the latest technology and determine the most cost-effective systems and updates. Demand for computer systems analysts grows as companies rely more on efficient user-friendly systems.