Java developer

National average salary: $106,611 per year

Primary duties: Java developers create and test programs that use Java, a programming language that organizations in various industries use. They integrate apps by designing server scripting and database architecture and support users by building assistance and documentation resources. Java developers are in demand because Java is one of the most commonly used programming languages that industry experts project to grow in the coming years.