Software engineer

National average salary: $108,896 per year

Primary duties: As individuals or as part of a team, software engineers are responsible for developing software applications, either for internal use by a company or as commercial products for a software developer. Their duties include coding, designing internet browsers, investigating issues with software programs and ensuring that their applications are user-friendly and efficient. With an increasing number of companies and industries relying on software programs for most tasks, software engineers are in high demand.